Country superstar Alan Jackson will be kicking off his next concert tour in Estero. Jackson will be appearing at Germain Arena on April 8 with Josh Turner and Chris Young on the first leg of the 15-city Freight Train Tour, named after his soon-to-be released album.

Tickets are now on sale.

The Freight Train album was released on March 30 and features eight Jackson original songs plus four more, including "It's Just That Way," the first single, and a duet with Lee Ann Womack on the Vern Gosdin classic, "Till the End."

When asked about the title track Jackson said, "It sounded different and just kind of stuck out. I guess when you really think about it, man, we've been rolling along here for a lot of years, just going like a freight train."

Jackson is one of the most successful and respected songwriter/performers in music. His career has spanned 20 years, netted 50 million album sales and met with consistent critical acclaim. Jackson's most recent collection, Good Time, became the fourth album of his career to debut simultaneously at #1 on Billboard's Top Country Albums and all-genre Billboard 200 sales charts and netted three #1 hits.
