

Taste of Home Cooking School at Germain

The News-Press staff • January 14, 2011

Taste of Home brings its most popular cooking show to Southwest Florida for the first time March 7. Taste of Home Cooking School offers live, interactive recipe demonstrations and cooking tips and techniques provided by culinary experts. The show is presented by The News-Press Media Group, Grandeur Magazine and WINK Radio; it will be from 6 to 8 p.m. at Germain Arena in Estero.

Tickets go on sale today.

The live show offers more than recipes.

Culinary experts share food preparation secrets and tips as well as humorous and heartwarming anecdotes, and glimpses into their kitchens, their homes and their lives.

"Like a good recipe, Taste of Home is a strong program because it brings together the right ingredients; they foster a loyal sense of community among like-minded home cooks of all ages," The News-Press Media Group President and Publisher Mei-Mei Chan said. "Likewise, The News-Press wants to connect our community to both local and national resources in the culinary arts."

Local and national businesses will have wares on display and provide items for numerous door prizes. Every audience member will receive a gift bag. Limited VIP seating admission costs $35, which includes premium parking, premium seating and a Taste of Home Cookbook.

General admission cost is $10 in advance and $15 at the door. Tickets are on sale at germainarena.com or at The Germain Arena box office at all Ticketmaster outlets.

Mom Dilemma #36:
Your daughter insists on wearing her princess costume to the grocery store. Allow it or not?

YES, at least she's dressed!

NO, I have some rules!
